New North Texas high school focuses on aviation

There's a new high school in North Texas teaching the next generation of aviation and aerospace professionals. It's called Rising Aviation in Addison. It's our area's only aviation and aerospace-centric high school.

ADDISON, Texas - There's a new high school in North Texas teaching the next generation of aviation and aerospace professionals.

Rising Aviation High School in Addison is the only aviation and aerospace-centric high school in the area.

It welcomed the first class of students in the fall but is just now celebrating its grand opening because of COVID-19.

"We want to be a game changer, take kids and their passion and show them the pathway that they can achieve these careers in aviation," said Brent Fitzgerald, the principal of Rising Aviation High School.
